Guidance and exams on request also in English, Italian, Swedish, German, Spanish and Latin

Admission requirements

Ancient Languages and Culture can be studied by any student presently registered and enrolled at the University. To begin the studies it is essential to acquire a sufficient knowledge of Latin/Greek. If such language skills have not been acquired in high school, for example, elementary and advanced language courses are continually provided in both languages. An elementary course in Latin is sometimes offered by the Summer University as well. Besides English, other languages which may be of use when studying Latin are Swedish, German, French and Italian. As there is a limited amount of contact teaching, prospective students should be motivated and capable of independent work.

Study guidance

Study guidance is offered by Timo Sironen, the lecturer of Ancient Languages and Culture, during his office hour on Wednesdays 11–12. Phone: +358-8-553 3310.

Ancient Languages and Culture

Both lines of study (Latin language and Roman literature, Ancient Greek and Greek literature) are open to all students only as a subsidiary (minor) subject, and students can choose either one of the study lines or both. Ancient Languages and Cultures examines the Greek and Roman culture of the Mediterranean, the Latin and Greek languages, and utilizes original sources in Latin and Greek. The goal of programme is to utilize historical linguistics in order to familiarize the students with Greco-Roman culture as well as its influence on modern cultures and languages.

Ancient Languages and Culture is an especially suitable minor subject for students of history and archaeology, but it is also suitable for students of languages, arts and culture and other students also because of its general nature.

Career options

The programme enables students to qualify as Latin teachers. It is also beneficial for those who plan to become researchers or teachers and for those who plan to work in positions that require an education in the Humanities (e.g. with modern languages, history, art history and literature, libraries and museums, education services and public relations).

Practical information

In addition to contact teaching, students are required to take a number of book exams independently. These can be taken on the examination dates of the Faculty of Humanities as well as on the examination dates of the programme's degree group (group II – Cultural Sciences). Students must sign-up for book exams at least 10 days in advance via WebOodi. Students are advised to consult the lecturer about suitable exam packages in advance.

As a reference book for the names and terminology in the field, students are suggested to use Antiikin käsikirja by P. Castrén and L. Pietilä-Castrén.

Timo Sironen, the lecturer of Ancient Languages and Culture, is responsible for all the teaching in the programme.

Study packages and learning outcomes

Latin language and literature

Upon completion of Basic Level studies (25 ECTS credits), students will be familiar with the main features of Ancient Roman culture and have the language skills to independently understand elementary Latin prose with the aid of reference materials. Upon completion of Intermediate Level studies (35 ECTS credits), students will have a more profound and expansive understanding of Latin, Latin literature, the overall field of classical history, and of the use of various sources.

Greek language and literature

Upon completion of Basic Level studies (25 ECTS credits), students will be familiar with the main features of Ancient Greek culture and have the language skills to independently understand classical Greek, mainly prose, with the aid of reference materials. Upon completion of Intermediate Level studies (35 ECTS credits), students will have a more profound and expansive understanding of Greek, Greek literature, the overall field of classical history, and of the use of various sources.
