Admission requirements

Philosophy can be studied by any student presently registered and enrolled at the University.

Commencement of studies

At the beginning of each term, the history department publishes a curriculum of Philosophy courses scheduled to be taught. Information regarding possible information sessions is posted on the Philosophy programme's notice board in the history department.

Study guidance

Study guidance is provided by the Lecturer of Philosophy, tel. +358 29 448 3311.

Philosophy

Philosophy is considered the oldest of all sciences. It studies the methodological problems common to all disciplines and eras, as well as ideological questions concerning human knowledge, language, argumentation and questions irreducible to these problems. Philosophy also explores questions concerning social and ethical principles as well. Central fields of study in Philosophy are metaphysics, logic, epistemology, philosophy of science, principles of natural and social sciences, values, ethics, aesthetics and social philosophy. The history of philosophy provides an overall view of the entirety of which these fields consist. The history of sciences explores how as sciences evolve the connection between science and philosophy is constantly renewed. Studies in the Philosophy programme provide a suitable foundation for analysing the advance of sciences through the study of principles, methods and values. Studying ethics and values from the viewpoint of philosophy is also useful in promoting social discourse.

Philosophical methods have proven especially beneficial in the academic education of researchers. Therefore the Philosophy study package is a suitable optional or additional subsidiary (minor) subject for all degree programmes in the Faculty of Humanities as well as programmes in the fields of the natural sciences, technical and medical fields, social and educational sciences and cultural research. Studies in philosophy can also be an advantage for postgraduate studies in various disciplines.

In addition, philosophy has recently become a compulsory subject in Finnish upper secondary schools, and demand for qualified teachers has increased significantly. Therefore it is a suitable subsidiary subject for students from various fields who aim to become teachers.

Any student enrolled at the University of Oulu can choose Philosophy as a subsidiary subject.

Practical information

Students can complete two study packages in Philosophy:

- Basic studies (25 ECTS credits)
- Intermediate studies (35 ECTS credits)

Nearly all courses in Philosophy can be completed as a book examination. Logic 700604P, for which the lecture course is recommended, is an exception as are the following courses (which are completed as seminar workshops): 700606 P A Classical Philosophy Work and Its Interpretation I; 700616A Seminar Course on Critical Reading; and 700617A A Classical Philosophy Work and Its Interpretation II. Students must sign up for book examinations ten days before the exam via WebOodi. The Lecturer of Philosophy is responsible for grading all book exams. One exception, however, is 700604P Logic, which is the responsibility of Lecturer Markku Mäki and can be taken as a book upon agreement. Book exams can be taken on the general examination days of the Faculty of Humanities or on the examination days of the degree group (Group I – History).

Advanced Level Courses in Philosophy are not taught at the University of Oulu and must be completed at other universities. Information on various alternatives can be obtained from the Lecturer of Philosophy.

The person responsible for the Basic and Intermediate study packages is the Lecturer of Philosophy.

Study packages and learning outcomes

Basic Studies 25 ECTS credits

After completing the Basic Studies package, students will have gained an understanding of the special nature of philosophical questions, their historical permanence and their significance in critical analysis of various disciplines, society and culture. Students can also perceive both the theoretical and practical significance of philosophy and are able to ask meaningful philosophical questions concerning ethically conscious every-day life as well as grasp the principles of their fields of study. The students will understand the central fundamental concepts and fundamental fields of theoretical and practical philosophy. Students will also be familiar with the main classics as well as historical stages of development in philosophy and can interpret elementary classical texts. Students should also possess the basic skills needed for constructive philosophical dialogue in seminars.

Intermediate Studies 35 ECTS credits

Intermediate Studies provides the student with a more fundamental overall view of the theories behind the contemporary trends in philosophy, and after completion the student should be knowledgeable about contemporary developments in Finnish philosophy. Students should have deepened their knowledge of ethics and be familiar with the application of ethical theories in the context of global problems. Students should be acquainted with the fundamentals of ethics and should have deepened their views on philosophical questions of various disciplines. The Intermediate Studies package should provide students with the skills to recognise their personal fields of interest in philosophy and should have deepened knowledge of their personal fields of interest by reading relevant literature and working in seminar groups. Students should have deepened their view of the classics of philosophy and learned to interpret the more difficult original writings in philosophy. Students furthermore should have developed their skills for creating philosophical dialogue and for presentation of constructive critics in seminars.
