Admission requirements

In order to study Literature as a major, students must pass an entrance exam held every summer. The Literature degree programme is also open to all other University of Oulu students as a subsidiary subject. Information regarding courses currently on offer is made available in the form of a curriculum issued at the beginning of each term on the degree programme's website.

Study guidance

Starting at the beginning of their first term, new students receive guidance on practical issues and planning their studies from teacher tutors and in peer groups. As part of the tutoring process, students produce a personal study plan (e-HOPS/e-PSP) for their BA and MA degrees. Updating the plan is required at the beginning of both the intermediate and the advanced studies.

The plan is directive; it is a tool with which the student follows the advancement of her or his studies. Central in the plan are the student's goals regarding their studies and career. More detailed instructions about e-HOPS/e-PSP can be found online on the websites of the Faculty of Humanities and Literature degree programme.

For general study guidance, students may turn to individual teachers. More specific guidance is given by the teacher responsible. A list of teachers responsible for examinations and courses can be found on the Literature bulletin board and on the degree programme's website. Also information regarding courses is posted on WebOodi.

A review of the studies in Literature

Literature may be taken as a major in the Faculty of Humanities. Students of Literature can freely choose subsidiary subjects from related disciplines, such as Art History and Film Studies. Another subsidiary subject possibility is Finnish, which is taken by many Literature students with the goal of becoming employed in the field of education or communications. Many other subjects in the Faculty of Humanities, such as languages, are suitable subsidiary subjects for students in the Literature programme as are subjects from other faculties as well.

Studies in literature provide an insight into the history of literature, the theory and methodology of literature research, and into practical analysis and interpretation of literary works. Literature is examined in relation to other art forms and cultural phenomena.

Literature is a free major subject; it offers students a diverse study path according to their own interests and career goals. Already after the Basic Studies in the first year, students can choose from many different options, e.g. what books to read or to write essays on, and which genre of literature and optional study programme to focus on. The Intermediary and Advanced studies provide students a thorough combination of knowledge and skills related to literature. Such an education increases the student's ability to comprehend and analyse large entities. It fosters practical capabilities needed in work life, such as the ability to scrutinize independently, teamwork skills and the ability to benefit from criticism. Moreover, studies in literature lead to a growth of intellectual curiosity and sensibility to different cultural meanings, which are useful skills in working life.

The teaching given in Literature varies in methods. In addition to lectures and learning in small groups, the student may choose internet courses and writing courses, for instance, and to accomplish the courses by examinations, home essays or reading groups.

Amongst the many teaching and research focuses of the programme are both Finnish and general literature; literary history and contemporary literature; literary genres from poetry to the novel and from children's literature to speculative fiction. The larger cultural and social questions studied are often related to community, Northern aspects, gender, class or multiculturalism.

Literature is a beneficial subsidiary subject for students aiming for jobs in the cultural fields and in such professional fields where a deep knowledge of the construction of cultural meanings is necessary.

Students of Finnish and Saami can choose Literature as a subsidiary subject freely; Literature is also an open subsidiary subject for all other students in the university. The subsidiary subject studies consist of 60 ECTS credits (25+35) of Basic and Intermediate Studies, and 60 ECTS credits of Advanced Studies.

Practical information

The works and research literature to be read. These lists are updated on our website at the beginning of each academic year. See <http://www.oulu.fi/kirjallisuus/>

Learning activities, teaching and assessment methods: It is recommended that the students choose lecture and small-group teaching courses, especially from the onset of their studies, rather than taking book examinations or other methods of learning. Courses can also be completed by means of home essays, lecture diaries (learning diaries) or other forms of examination agreed upon with the teacher. Self-study groups and study circles run by students (related to the subject matters of their theses, for instance) are very encouraged. Students hoping to earn credit by this kind of work should contact the Professor or the Senior Lecturer responsible for the study unit in question.

Mandatory lecture courses are usually completed by taking a formal examination held at the end of the lecture series. However, those who a) have a valid excuse to not participate in the examination, b) have previously failed the examination, or c) want to improve on their examination results, have the chance to complete the course by taking an examination on one of examination days of the Faculty or degree group (Group II – Culture Studies) or in an examination separately arranged.

Optional lecture courses (i.e. lectures which can usually be used to compensate for study units) are primarily completed by taking an examination held at the end of the lecture series. As with the mandatory courses, students may take examinations on other examination days as well.

Practicum teaching refers to teaching given to a group of about ten students. Practicum courses demand active participation and discussion as well as presentations and exercise work. Practicums and the Proseminar and Seminar form a continuum, which gradually familiarizes students with literary interpretation and analysis, and with the principles of literary and cultural research. Practicums, like most courses, require an 80% attendance rate.

Home essays and specialized portfolio work are the recommended methods for completing courses at the later stages of the student's Advanced studies. Details (length of essays, content of portfolios, use of source material, etc.) should be agreed upon with the examiner.

A lecture diary (learning diary) serves to allow commenting and further consideration of the lecture topic or subject matter of the previous lecture. A lecture diary is therefore not the same as lecture notes or a summary but should combine poignant summarization of the lectures with independent, critical writing and commentary on the matters discussed in the lectures; in other words, a learning diary is also a lesson in itself. The lecturer provides further guidelines as to the requirements for lecture diaries.

The length of home essays and lecture diaries is defined as follows: 2 ECTS credits = ca. 6 pages; 5 ECTS credits = ca. 15 pages, 10 ECTS credits = 25 pages. Each page must have approx. 30 lines, each line about 60 characters. Times New Roman or similar font should be used, and the font size should be 12.

Guidelines on writing the essays are updated on our website. For additional information, you may also want to take a look at the study guide of the Faculty.

Web courses can be used to complete a number of courses in the degree requirements. The Literature degree programme at the University of Oulu is one of the producers of online courses for the Finnish Virtual University Network of Literary and Art Studies, which offers 5–10 online courses every year, free of charge for Literature students. The courses are mostly online, distance study. More information is available on the Literature degree programme's website and at <http://verkko-opetus.utu.fi/virtuaalikirjallisuus>.

Self-study groups and study circles are arranged on the initiative of the students themselves. The groups typically consist of 5–6 students, who complete the course, or a segment of it, in similar manner to a practicum work (presentation, session record, final assignment). The students carry the responsibility for learning and maintaining group progress. The teacher initiates the group's work but is not present at most sessions.

Excluding mandatory lectures, practicums and theses, many courses can be completed as book examinations, on the examination days of the Faculty or the degree group (Group II – Cultural Studies), or, upon separate agreement, as a home essay or portfolio. Examination days can be found online at: <http://www oulu.fi/hutk/node/14057>. Lecture series have their own examinations which require no separate registration. Exams are based on study units in their given proportion.

Students must register for faculty and degree group examinations in WebOodi ten days in advance. A list of teachers responsible for different examinations (“tentaattorilista”) can be found on the Literature bulletin board and the degree programme's website.

Credit records and grades: Completed courses are recorded in the study register. Therefore, it is essential for students to indicate their student number or full social security number when registering for exams, and in home essays and lecture diaries. If the completed studies are such that the credits may be used for more than one course, students must without exception clearly indicate which course they wish to use their credits for in the study register. If any special agreements have been made, the student must refer to the agreement in question (for example, by mentioning the date of the email).

The easiest way for students to obtain a transcript of their completed studies is via WebOodi, but it is also possible to get an official copy from the University Student Services. After completing an entire study package (Basic, Intermediate or Advanced Studies), students should contact the study services at Snellmania and request that the studies be compiled as a package in the Oodi register. The study packages along with the corresponding overall grades will be listed in the student's degree certificate.

Special instructions for subsidiary subject students and those who have previously earned credit via Open University: Subsidiary subject students need not participate in the Proseminar in the Intermediate Studies. During the Advances studies, students taking Literature as a subsidiary subject may choose the option of writing a thesis in the subsidiary subject or corresponding studies; in this case, the student must take part in the MA Thesis Seminar as well. Those students who came through the Open University must take the Proseminar before proceeding to the Advanced studies.

Employment prospects

The career prospects of a student majoring in Literature are not strictly predefined, for the structure of the entire degree has an effect on their employment potential. The range of degrees possibilities is very diverse given the available subsidiary subject options. Different combinations of subjects provide qualifications for various professional fields: teaching on different levels; cultural work in the fields of publishing or communications and information; working in art or culture organizations or projects; writing, producing or developing contents in various new and traditional media careers. Studying literature may also provide some of the basic qualifications for working in cultural administration or in libraries. Some of the students proceed to post-graduate studies, after which they may end up working as researchers.

Students should acquaint themselves with the University Career Services and Student Services in order to find a good combination of subjects in regards to their career wishes. Students should also design their personal study plan (e-HOPS/e-PSP) with the help of the teachers of the degree programme and the study guidance provided by the university.

Literature can be taken as a major subject in the Teacher of Finnish and Literature degree, in which case Literature is combined with Finnish and Pedagogical Studies. Further information on subject teacher education can be found in a dedicated chapter in the study guide of the Faculty of Humanities.

The number of recommended subsidiary subjects for students aiming to be employed in culture or communications fields is unlimited, yet some examples include: Film Studies, Information Studies, Art History, Cultural Anthropology, Finnish or foreign languages, Communications Studies – or Sociology, Environmental Studies in the Humanities, Information Processing Science, and Marketing. Students' personal hobbies and cultural activities, their initiative, and possible earlier work experience have an especially important role when proceeding into working life after completing the degree.

Study packages and learning outcomes

After completing the Basic Studies package, students are able to describe the different areas of literary research in a preliminary way, are familiar with the central terminology of the field and can also to apply it in literary analysis and interpretation. Students are also able to describe the history of different genres and styles from antiquity to the modern day, both for general as well as Finnish literature.

After completing the Intermediate Studies package, students are able to describe the central theories and methodology trends in literary research. They can also describe more deeply some aspects of literary research, cultural research or the teaching of literature and Finnish, as well as the key developments of a period in literary history and the literature of a specific language area. Students majoring in Literature are also able to apply this knowledge to create short academic theses.

After completing the Advanced Studies package, students have the ability to apply various approaches of literary and cultural research when considering literary and cultural phenomena. Students also have a detailed understanding of their chosen special focus of literary or cultural research and/or the teaching of Finnish and Literature. Students have the skills to plan, carry out, and write an academic thesis. They are able to apply their skills in working life: to comprehend and analyse large bodies of material, to work patiently on long projects, and to actively learn new things. The literary and cultural education they have learned will have given them an analytical imagination when considering questions that concern culture, individual subjects and society.

Timing:

1st year

Learning outcomes:

To gain understanding of the classic works of Finnish literature, and to practise close reading and interpretation of literature by applying literary concepts.

Upon completing the course, students can – through writing and discussing – analyse and evaluate literary art by applying concepts of literary analysis. They are able to analyse the structural and thematic aspects of Finnish fiction as well as the main contextual tenets. The students are also comfortable with giving and receiving feedback in the context of academic analysis.

Contents:

The course focuses on literary analysis and interpretation by delving into a few Finnish classics of modern literature (mostly narrative fiction), on which brief text analysis exercises are written and discussed in a group.

Mode of delivery:

Contact teaching

Learning activities and teaching methods:

Practicum group work / book examination, home essay or self-study group.

Target group:

For major students of Literature and for those subsidiary subject students who have Finnish as their major and are studying to become teachers, the course may not be taken as a book exam, home essay or self-study group. Other subsidiary students may complete the course by book exam, home essays, or self-study group.

Prerequisites and co-requisites:

Introduction to the Field, Introduction to Literary Studies 1, and Literary History 1 + 2.

Recommended or required reading:

A list of works is available on the degree programme website at the beginning of each term. For the background, it may also be useful to read some texts considering the analysis of narrative fiction (for these, too, see the website <http://www.oulu.fi/kirjallisuus/>).

Timing:

First year

Learning outcomes:

The course aims to deepen the student's knowledge of classic literary works and to further improve their analysis skills. It also gives practical knowledge on the methodological possibilities of literary research. Upon completing the course, students are more familiar with classic literary works and their main features. They have the skills to analyse the structures of narrative fiction, poetry and drama. They are able to consider the central methods of analysis and interpretation of literary texts relevant for each case.

Contents:

The course focuses on the analysis and interpretation of literature by studying the classic works of modern literature (narrative fiction, but also poetry and drama). Also a number of short research texts considering those works will be studied. Students write extensive texts on classics of modern literature during the course.

Mode of delivery:

Contact teaching or self study

Learning activities and teaching methods:

Practicum group work (major students; depending on teaching resources, the group work may be open also to some of those subsidiary subjects students who have Finnish as their major and are studying to become teachers); home essay, book exam or self-study group (subsidiary subject students).

Target group:

For major students of Literature, the course cannot be taken by book exam, home essay or self-study group. Subsidiary students usually (see above) complete the course by book exam, home essays, or self-study group.

Prerequisites and co-requisites:

Introduction to the Field; Introduction to Literary Studies 1; Fiction Practicum 1, Literary History 1 + 2. As a co-requisite, Introduction to Literary Studies 2 is recommended.

Timing:

1st year

Learning outcomes:

To gain understanding of the classic works of Finnish literature, and to practise close reading and interpretation of literature by applying literary concepts.

Upon completing the course, students can – through writing and discussing – analyse and evaluate literary art by applying concepts of literary analysis. They are able to analyse the structural and thematic aspects of Finnish fiction as well as the main contextual tenets. The students are also comfortable with giving and receiving feedback in the context of academic analysis.

Contents:

The course focuses on literary analysis and interpretation by delving into a few Finnish classics of modern literature (mostly narrative fiction), on which brief text analysis exercises are written and discussed in a group.

Mode of delivery:

Contact teaching

Learning activities and teaching methods:

Practicum group work / book examination, home essay or self-study group.

Target group:

For major students of Literature and for those subsidiary subject students who have Finnish as their major and are studying to become teachers, the course may not be taken as a book exam, home essay or self-study group. Other subsidiary students may complete the course by book exam, home essays, or self-study group.

Prerequisites and co-requisites:

Introduction to the Field, Introduction to Literary Studies 1, and Literary History 1 + 2.

Recommended or required reading:

A list of works is available on the degree programme website at the beginning of each term. For the background, it may also be useful to read some texts considering the analysis of narrative fiction (for these, too, see the website <http://www oulu.fi/kirjallisuus/>).

Learning outcomes:

The course aims to deepen the student's knowledge of classic literary works and to further improve their analysis skills. It also gives practical knowledge on the methodological possibilities of literary research. Upon completing the course, students are more familiar with classic literary works and their main features. They have the skills to analyse the structures of narrative fiction, poetry and drama. They are able to consider the central methods of analysis and interpretation of literary texts relevant for each case.

Contents:

The course focuses on the analysis and interpretation of literature by studying the classic works of modern literature (narrative fiction, but also poetry and drama). Also a number of short research texts considering those works will be studied. Students write extensive texts on classics of modern literature during the course.

Mode of delivery:

Contact teaching or self study

Learning activities and teaching methods:

Practicum group work (major students; depending on teaching resources, the group work may be open also to some of those subsidiary subjects students who have Finnish as their major and are studying to become teachers); home essay, book exam or self-study group (subsidiary subject students).

Target group:

For major students of Literature, the course cannot be taken by book exam, home essay or self-study group. Subsidiary students usually (see above) complete the course by book exam, home essays, or self-study group.

Prerequisites and co-requisites:

Introduction to the Field; Introduction to Literary Studies 1; Fiction Practicum 1, Literary History 1 + 2. As a co-requisite, Introduction to Literary Studies 2 is recommended.

Recommended or required reading:
