

First Intensive Training School: Product development and Productisation (10 ECTS)

August 14-27th, 2017, University of Oulu, Finland, Lecture hall 2

Advanced Material Doctoral Program (ADMA-DP) KAVA-project funded by EIT Raw Materials, organizes First Intensive Training school for doctoral students at the University of Oulu, Finland. Doctoral students, company and municipality representatives as well as other interested parties are warmly welcome to attend!

The main idea of the school is to add innovation and entrepreneurs mindset for people working in the Raw Materials field by providing knowledge and skills for product management. Well managed products are essential success factor for various sized companies, from SMEs to large industrial consortiums. Although products are the instruments that bring income for enterprises often they are not properly managed or acknowledged. The courses that are offered provide a chance to strengthen your knowledge and career opportunities in industry, research or in own company!

Teachers are highly qualified professionals; Dr Arto Tolonen, Dr Jukka Majava and Professor Harri Haapasalo from the Industrial Engineering and Management Research Unit, University of Oulu. The combination of strong industrial background and the latest research knowledge provide a holistic view on the course topics.

The First Intensive Training school gives first two courses on topics: New product development and Productisation, at the University of Oulu, Finland, 14-27.8.2017.

The Second Intensive Training school provides third (and possibly fourth) course under topics Product management and Product portfolio management at Tallinn University of Technology, Estonia, on May 2018.

Please, register to the First Intensive training school (Oulu) until 31st of July, 2017 here as limited number of places are available.

ADMA-DP KAVA project covers coffee breaks, other costs are paid by the participants' own funding. No registration fee is required.

You are warmly welcome!
